Consider this quote from Martin Luther. He is referring to verse 23.

This is a rich comfort and an exceedingly high honor. What greater glory and honor can there be than for us poor, miserable people on earth to be the Divine Majesty's dwelling, pleasure-ground, and paradise, yes, His heavenly kingdom? Whatever you speak and do will please Him and will be regarded as spoken and done by Him, and whoever inflicts injury or sorrow on you will be doing it to Him. In addition, He will defend you well in body and soul. No one will consume you unless he has devoured Him first. No one will touch a hair of your head unless it is His will, and unless he did this to Him first. In brief, your deeds will be accounted right and will continue over against all the raging and fuming of the devil and the world—unless both the Father and Christ are no longer God. Thus we are not only absolutely sure of all grace, love, and friendship in yonder life; but we are also assured that everything we teach here as Christian will be true, that our life will be pleasing and acceptable to God, and that it will all prosper permanently.
